Personal management

I consider myself to be a confident and honest person, and have always had a positive attitude towards developing new strengths and receiving constructive criticism, as I feel that this can only improve my skills and help me achieve my personal and career goals.

I have the ability to plan and manage time, making effective use of resources available in order to achieve any goals set. The use of initiative, experience and being focused, are other assets that have helped me achieve my goals. I have the ability to identify and suggest new ideas, at the same time recognizing and respecting other people's diversity and individual differences.
